Kirby feels

"I've seen it multiple times when people pirate some sort of software, fall in love with it, and then due to constant updates reminders end up buying it, just for the convenience. Basically, when developers provide a good service, people see the value in spending money. Minecraft is a great example. With constant updates, it's so clear you should throw your money at the screen - simply provide a service, making it more convenient than searching for cracks."

"We've decided to make Speedrunners free when it comes out. The local version of Speedrunners will be available completely free. You'll be able to download it and play with your friends on the couch or use any offline features. The online part will be what people pay money for, the service we provide to players"

JD - Are you a gamer at all? = 9/21/18

AliteNitro - I play games, but i dont play games all day

JD - But are you a gamer

AliteNitro - I would say yes because i play games

JD - But are you a "gamer"

AliteNitro - Yes

JD - Solve the equation $x^2 = 289$

AliteNitro - Look i know that's Algebra 1

I dont know anything about Algebra because i am not in 9th grade

AliteNitro - But does math have anything to do with gaming?

Do they share something in common?

Is gaming the same as math?

JD - Toenail is good.

AliteNitro - And this better not be quoted in Kirb. Feels

JD - Toenail is good

AliteNitro - the answer is 144.5

JD - No.

Look up the answer if you want

AliteNitro - The question looks like Algebra

JD - You got it wrong, look it up.

$x = 17$
